Subscribe Now | Sign In

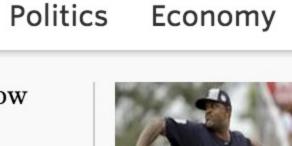

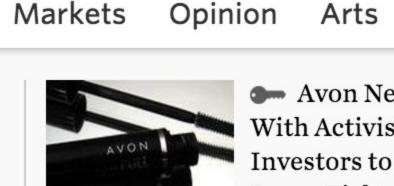

Oil Firms Slow Exploration to Weather Low-Price

World

U.S.

Business Tech Cost of Sports TV Raises Stakes in Yankees, Comcast

O COMMENTS

Avon Nears Deal With Activist Investors to Avoid

Most Popular Videos

Smaller Gets

WSJ's Guide to

England's Soccer

Brussels Protesters

Cruz Blames Trump

for 'Tabloid Smear'

Belgium Conducts

Raids, Terror-Cell

Links Emerge

Most Popular Articles

Facebook Asks

Users Far From

Harm's Way 🗪

Massive Robots

Keep Docks

Hedge Fund

Founder Sells

Estate for a Record

Pakistan Explosion

Kills at Least 65

Trump's Suburban

Weakness Could

Hurt in November

$13.6 Million -

Shipshape 🗪

Pakistan if in

Clash With Police

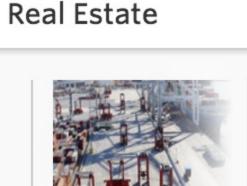

Pronouncing

Smarter

Teams

IPhone SE Review:

Life

 \bowtie

(000)

Media Startup Some Spider

By LUKAS I. ALPERT May 7, 2015 1:05 pm ET

Digital media startup Some Spider is just getting off the ground, but it is already landing some high-profile talent that has been instrumental in helping the traditional print world transition to digital. RAJIV PANT

The company has nabbed its second top executive from the New York Times in recent months, hiring away its well-respected Chief Technology Officer Rajiv Pant. Mr. Pant, whose departure from the Times was announced earlier this week, will also oversee technology, product and design at the New York-based startup. He will join the Times' former general manager for core digital products, Paul Smurl, who signed on as Some Spider's chief operating officer in March.

feel there is an opportunity to build products where technology is as much a part of life as is the journalism," said the 40-year-old Mr. Pant. Some Spider is the brainchild of Vinit Bharara, who made his name creating e-commerce startup Quidsi Inc. - the parent company of

"I have been approached by startups before, but in Some Spider, I

Diapers.com and Soap.com — and then selling it to Amazon.com Inc. in 2010 for about $550 million. Last fall he launched Some Spider, which is designed to own a network of news sites based off of the blogging platform Cafe.com. Cafe.com was shut down and is being re-imagined around a new site called The Mid, which will focus on issues facing 35- to 45-year-olds

as they go through mid-life. Earlier this year, the company acquired the parenting blog Scary Mommy. "We are really looking to be a fusion between an online publisher and an identity-focused social network," said Mr. Bharara, whose brother, Preet Bharara, is the U.S. Attorney for the southern district

Mr. Pant worked at the Times for four years, during which he helped oversee the newsroom's transformation to a digital subscription model and to a news institution driven by data analytics and engineering.

"He was vitally important to the transition to the mobile and video experience," said Mr. Smurl. "He joined just when we switched the digital subscription model, during which it grew from zero to a $200 million-a-year business."

Mr. Pant said he plans to pledge 20% of his equity in Some Spider to the charity Doctors Without Borders.

"I believe this startup is going to be hugely successful and my commitment will help me fulfill my lifelong dream of giving a significant amount of money to organizations that help those most in need, often putting their own lives at risk," he said.

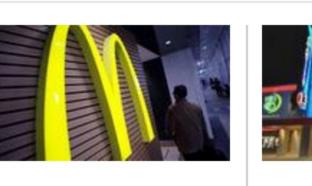

Share this: http://on.wsj.com/1llhoWh

NEW YORK TIMES

RAJIV PANT

< PREVIOUS Who Is Winning the Fast Food Fight Online?

of New York.

NEXT > Screenvision to Pitch Advertisers on Better Data and Blockbusters Like 'Star Wars' to Sell Movie Theater Ads

SHARE YOUR THOUGHTS There are 0 comments.

Sign In to comment

Newest

DIGITAL MEDIA

Editors' Picks

ELECTION 2016

Ryan's Door 🕶

ESSAY A Happy Marriage Across Party Lines

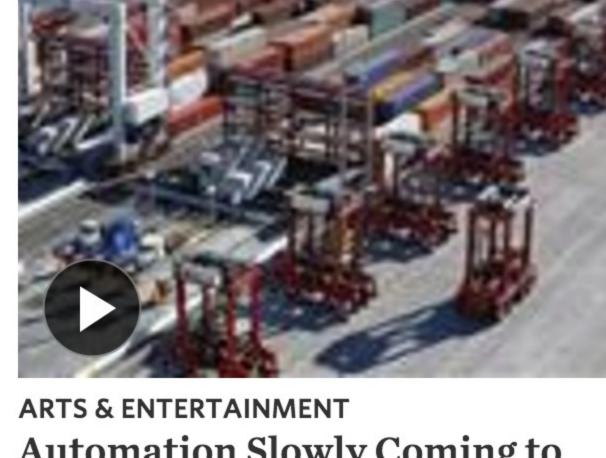

Questions About Brussels

Turbulent Campaign Reaches

First Responders Aren't Local

Automation Slowly Coming to U.S. Ports

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

WSJ Membership WSJ+ Membership Benefits Digital Subscription Print Subscription Print and Digital Subscription

Why Subscribe? Download WSJ Apps for iOS and Android Corporate Subscriptions Professor Journal

Student Journal

Customer Service Customer Center

U.S. Edition ▼

Live Help Redesign Guided Tour

Emails & Alerts Guides My News Portfolio RSS Feeds Topics

Video Center

Watchlist

Podcasts

Tools & Features

Ads

Advertise

Advertise Locally Commercial Real Estate Ads Place a Classified Ad Sell Your Business Sell Your Home Recruitment & Career Ads

Jobs at WSJ News Archive Register for Free Reprints

MarketWatch

Subscribe

Content Partnerships

More

Corrections

TOP ≈

Sign In

Copyright ©2015 Dow Jones & Company, Inc. All Rights Reserved.

Factiva

Get it on Windows 10

Mansion Global

Dow Jones Products

BigCharts DJX Dow Jones Newswires

Financial News